Hi Royden,

Sure, I'd be happy to chat with you about Basecamp v Trello. I've used both systems, Basecamp more extensively, and Trello not for several years. To me, Basecamp is better for collaborative work as it's designed to facilitate interactions and transparency with your colleagues. I like Trello for more independent or task orientation project management.

I'm open next Monday or Tuesday (until 3:30p) - would one of those days work for you?

Hi Patti,

My name is Royden Saah and I coordinate the Island Mouse project with which John Godwin, Fred (copied), Jason, and Todd are all involved.

Fred mentioned that you are using Base Camp to coordinate aspects of the GES. Could we speak sometime soon. I am looking at two systems (BaseCamp and Trello) and would like to speak with you and a colleague of mine who uses Trello and compare them a bit by users of the systems. I estimate the call to be ~30 min, so if this seems doable, please let me know.

Many Thnaks,

Royden
