

Developing a Consensus Pathway for Field Testing of Modified Mosquitoes with Driving Transgenes

July 11-13, 2017

Co-hosted in Geneva, Switzerland by the World Health Organization

Participant List¹

Aggrey Ambali
New Partnership for Africa's Development

Christophe Boete
IRD, France

Catherine Bourgouin
Institut Pasteur

Jeremy Bouyer
IAEA

Austin Burt
Imperial College London

Frank Collins
University of Notre Dame

Brinda Dass
Foundation for the NIH

Anna Drexler
World Health Organization

Philip Eckhoff
Institute for Disease Modeling

Claudia Emerson
McMaster University

Dirk Engels
World Health Organization

Florence Fouque
World Health Organization

Charles Godfray
Oxford University

Michael Gottlieb
Foundation for the NIH

Fred Gould
North Carolina State University

Brian Greenwood
London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine

Lee Hall
National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases

Stephanie James
Foundation for the NIH

Steve Lindsay
Durham University

Jo Lines
London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine

Kevin Marsh
University of Oxford

Leonard Mboera
National Institute for Medical Research

Charles Mbogo Kenya Medical Research Institute
(KEMRI)

Abraham Mnzava
African Leaders Malaria Alliance

David O'Brochta
Foundation for the NIH

Fredros Okumu
Ifakara Health Institute

Seth Owusu-Agyei
University of Health & Allied Sciences

Hector Quemada
Danforth Plant Science Center

Moussa Savadogo
New Partnership for Africa's Development

Jerome Singh
CAPRISA

Emmanuel Temu
World Health Organization

Willy Tonui
National Biosafety Authority, Kenya

Karen Tountas
Foundation for the NIH

Yeya Touré
University of Bamako

Raman Velayudhan
World Health Organization

¹Includes Core Working Group members and additional scientific experts, Foundation for the NIH scientific staff, and invited observers